Addressing Adverse Childhood Experiences at Local Health Jurisdictions

When: Tuesday, May 27, 2014

Time: 12:00–1:00 p.m. (Pacific)

Presenters:

Melanie Gillespie, MBA and Laura Porter

Register

Research and training around adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) have gained widespread attention and fueled numerous initiatives over the past two decades. In the May session of Hot Topics, leaders from Washington's Comprehensive Health Education Foundation explain efforts to coordinate the growing number of ways people are addressing ACEs so that this work can have a collective impact.

In this one-hour webinar, Melanie Gillespie, MBA, and Laura Porter explain why ACEs are powerful drivers of health. They will reveal new data about the proven practices for building resilience against ACEs. Gillespie and Porter will also share useful resources for taking action with local decision-makers and will discuss the ACEs Learning Institute, a new initiative to provide support for those who are addressing ACEs in their communities.

Register today for the May Hot Topics in Practice to learn new information about the impact of ACEs in our communities and the resources to address them.

Slides will be available the morning of the session on the Hot Topics website. This session will be recorded and the archive posted by the next day.

The Northwest Center for Public Health Practice invites you to participate in this monthly Hot Topics forum. Hot Topics provides an authoritative hour-long forum each month for discussing topics that are important to the public health practice community.

A note about audio during the webinar:

We offer audio for this webinar through the phone or through your computer's speakers. Due to differences in internet quality at viewers' locations, we can't guarantee that the computer audio will be smooth and continuous. If the audio cuts out and is distracting, please call in on the phone line instead.
